Ann Baddour
Ann Baddour is the state director of Appleseed projects aimed at bringing low-income and immigrant consumers into the financial mainstream. She is actively involved in reform of regulations governing payday and auto title lending in Texas to build greater consumer protection into these transactions. Her work in the areas of immigrant financial education and improving consumer disclosure and protection in remittance transactions has been presented at economic conferences in Benin, Africa; Mexico; and the European Union. Ann also oversees Texas Appleseed’s project on protecting the rights of immigrants with mental disabilities in the immigration court and detention system. She is a member of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau’s Consumer Advisory Board, serving a three-year term ending in 2017. Ann is a Fulbright Scholar with a Master of Public Affairs Degree from the LBJ School of Public Affairs and a Masters Degree in Middle Eastern Studies from The University of Texas at Austin.

Patricia Mejia
Patricia Mejia is the Director of Community Engagement at Methodist Healthcare Ministries where she oversees the organization’s regional strategies and collective impact initiatives by interfacing with stakeholders, funded partners and localized churches. She is responsible for forming collaborative partnerships that establish a shared community vision to facilitate systems and social change as well as leveraging philanthropic investments. Patricia earned a master’s degree from St. Mary’s University and has completed doctoral coursework from Brandeis University. As a National Hispae Leadership Institute Fellow, she completed the Executive Leadership Program through the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard. She has studied interfaith community development projects in Bangladesh, Honduras, and Turkey, and she currently serves as Board chair of Network, a national Catholic social justice lobby.

Caroline Ratcliffe
Caroline Ratcliffe is a senior fellow and codirector of the Opportunity and Ownership initiative at the Urban Institute. She has published and spoken extensively on poverty, emergency savings, alternative financial-sector products, and welfare programs and policies, and has evaluated programs aimed at moving low-income families into the financial mainstream and studied how welfare programs and policies affect families’ economic well-being. Her research also examines persistent childhood poverty and how it relates to adult success. Caroline has held positions at the Congressional Budget Office and Brookings Institution. She serves on the Aspen Institute’s advisory group for its Expanding Prosperity Impact Collaborative (EPIC). Caroline’s research has been cited in the Economist, New York Times, Washington Post, and Wall Street Journal, and has appeared on C-SPAN and NPR. She was also a visiting associate professor at Georgetown University. She holds a PhD in economics from Cornell University.

Raquel Valdez
As Chief Operating Officer of BCL, Raquel has developed the organization’s Homeownership, Community Development and Entrepreneurship lines of business in both Austin and Dallas markets, focusing on the creation of livable wage jobs at businesses using green practices to promote health economic growth. In previous roles, she worked alongside statewide partners to launch a payday alternative program, signing several employers, and providing over $7 million in affordable short-term lending to over 6,000 borrowers. A graduate of Leadership Texas’s Power Pipeline, Raquel serves as a Board Member of the Dream Come True Foundation, a workforce development organization in Austin and as the Vice President of I-10 Corridor Association, which promotes economic development in rural towns along interstate 10 in Texas, and served as Chair of the Greater Austin Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Accessing Capital Committee; Treasurer and Vice President of the Young Hispanic Professionals Association of Austin (YHPAA). Raquel holds a B.B.A. from the University of Texas at San Antonio in Management and Marketing.

Carolyn L. Watson
Carolyn L. Watson is a Vice President of Corporate Responsibility at JPMorgan Chase, which she joined in 2011. She directs the JPMorgan Chase Foundation’s philanthropic investments for Houston, Austin, San Antonio and El Paso, which collectively employ more than 11,000 people. The approach of each high-impact investment is to leverage the company’s strength and the dedication of its talented employees to tackle pressing social and economic challenges. Carolyn has led the development of a $5 million, 5-year workforce investment strategy to address Houston’s acute training and education gaps. In partnership with area employers, she led the development of PetrochemWorks.com, an engaging and interactive career platform targeting high school students and young adults for careers in the petrochemical industry. Before joining Chase, Carolyn served as a program officer for the Rockwell Fund, Inc. A native Texan, Carolyn holds a BA from Louisiana State University and a Master of Public Affairs degree from the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas at Austin, and a Master of Science in Management from Stanford’s Graduate School of Business. Houston Woman Magazine named her one of Houston’s 50 Most Influential Women of 2015.
